Enterprise Training Programme

Starting out, booming, struggling, expanding, panicking – if any of these describe your current business mode, Nature Coast Enterprise has a training programme to help. Fully funded by New Zealand Trade & Enterprise and free to you, Nature Coast Enterprise can offer small to medium sized business training in a wide range of topics.

Helene Judge, Business Development Manager at Nature Coast Enterprise, gets asked some interesting questions. "I get asked for info on anything from licences for exporting; homeopathic labelling; or really general questions about how to start up a business." She spends time with people to find out what their business challenges are – this helps her work out what kind of training they need.

Michael O'Hagan from Forest Lakes at Lake Waitawa says the Managing Change course he attended was fantastic. "You learn lots of relevant things like how to set goals with manageable steps. I feel better equipped now."

Work smarter not harder

SK Bakery is booming but owners James Cootes and his wife Annette aren't sitting back. James has done many enterprise training programmes and says he's benefited from every one. "I also use them to up skill my staff, which helps retain them."
