Calling All Women

The Kapiti Women's Centre's door is open

Centre Manager, Rae, says getting people in the door is her biggest challenge. "Once women make the decision to get here, they just love it," she says. "You don't need a big drama in your life to come here. We're an everyday place for everyday women." Services include free counselling, clothing exchange, variety of courses, free pregnancy tests, support groups, meeting room hire and a place for a "cuppa and a chat".

The Centre runs many classes including Playing With Plaster. Tutor, Gill, says she loves seeing women "giving it a go. They discover things they think they could never create," says Gill. Her next class is called Mad Mirrors which still has places left. "We always have a laugh."

Counselling is free. Pop into the Centre to register. It's totally confidential.

Centre Manager Rae says it doesn't matter where you're from, where you're at or where you're going – the Centre is open to all women. Rae says that women are often told what they can't do. We're about what you can do."
